Astraea Ocean White Negroni 17

This cocktail gets special mention. Astraea's line of four gins were locally created by Danielle Leavell, who recently became only the second American admitted to the UK Gin Guild since its establishment in 1638. One of Danielle's gins is Astraea Ocean, which is unlike any gin we have ever tried before. We think it makes a perfect 'white negroni'.

The white negroni's history is that famed bartender, Wayne Collins, was visiting Bordeaux, France amidst blistering summer heat. He paired Plymouth Gin with Lillet Blanc and Suze, a slightly bitter liqueur made from gentian and alpine flowers. The white negroni's ensuing enormous and quite deserved worldwide popularity created the demand for Suze liqueur to be imported to the United States, where it was completely unknown and unavailable prior.

Astraea Ocean Gin, Suze Liqueur, Lillet Blanc, Licor 43 was created by our own bartender, Stefan Giles, as he mixed it in varying proportions one evening until we had it exactly how we want the Ocean Gin's briny, crisp notes framed and balanced. It's one of those cocktails that makes one imagine sitting next to the bluest and green sea on a summer verandah . . .

This is a great example of a local talent creating a truly unique, lovely and ultra premium product that becomes an outstanding integrated and balanced cocktail that no other gin could duplicate.
